Creation Of You Own Web Site.

Some asserted to me that it is better to take advantage of the visual editor, but thus did not consider as the debt to warn that certain skills and knowledge in the field of HTML in any case be required. Others insisted on that I have by heart learnt HTML and then no visual editors will be necessary for me. But the prospect closely to be engaged another's to me and very far programming language for me, fine me confused.

The third repeated that will teach me all at once, from simple to difficult, but those initial instructions which they offered me, simply confused me. As a result I got confused more and more.

I have come to a conclusion what to do nevertheless something it is necessary. And then has made the list of purchases with which help has decided to disentangle all problems. So here it:

- Curriculum HTML lasting some weeks and cost $200;
- The graphic editor in cost $250, supplied with detailed instructions on work with it on which listing it was necessary to climb up longer, than the Everest;
- A subscription to a site with graphic galleries - still $30;
- Graphic optimization for $40 plus still the whole mountain of the unpacked documentation and instructions;
- The scanner (to make a copy of the photos and to insert on a site);
- And it is a lot of that else about what to me was spoken by different advisers as about the most necessary. To a great regret, in process of experience accumulation, I was convinced that the majority of my purchases have appeared absolutely unnecessary.

My book shelves cracked and threatened to fall off under weight of listings of the "most necessary" documentation. And, naturally, me the question on how I should load my creation on a remote server very disturbed. With a shiver I assumed that for this purpose something is required to me still "most necessary".

Eventually, I have reached the necessary level, much have understood and have diametrically reconsidered the sight at the majority of things in the given sphere. Now not in a condition to confuse me any "adviser» and I perfectly know, as well as that it is necessary to do. But, to the greatest regret, I not simply guess, and I was completely confident that each beginner in this area gets to precisely same situation. And under the pressure of all similar "experts" and "the teachers", definitively confused and confused, the decision that the simplest way to finish with all these problems - to say goodbye to idea of creation of the site with your own forces.

Why when people reach the necessary level, they forget about problems of beginners, forget what were in precisely same situation and had the same problems?! Why so all the time occurs, and between beginners and experts almost unapproachable wall lies? Why practically nobody sees those benefits which can be taken, helping beginners to solve their problems and giving them possibility to study on our errors, instead of on their own?
