First of all, you should stay away from emails. If you are an active internet user you should probably encountered a lot of spam. What was your reaction? I am sure that you were extremely irritated and wanted to make everything possible in order to get rid of the annoying sender. The same is reaction of the others. That is why, you should be careful when sending advertising letters and trying to catch people's attention. If there is an option to sign up for your web site, you should give people an opportunity to sign out every time they like. What is more, it is better to make sending information letters option voluntary. In other words if anyone does not want to receive news letters from you it is better not to as you risk to lose clients. People who really get interested in what you are doing will search for the information on their own and will try to get the latest update from your web site.

It is better to use other ways of advertising than pop up ads and email. Affiliate marketing is one of the best options in such a case.
